The Journal of Contemplative Psychotherapy is published biennially by The Naropa Institute. No part of this volume may be reproduced in any form (except for brief quotations, not to exceed 500 words, in a review or professional work) without permission in writing from the author and publisher. All rights to articles revert to authors.

The Journal encourages submission of papers that address any aspect of psychology and psychotherapy, but we prefer those that include clear descriptions of clinical application and its relation to personal contemplative practice. Please double-space your manuscript and submit it in triplicate to: The Editor, Journal of Contemplative Psychotherapy, The Naropa Institute, 2130 Arapahoe Ave., Boulder, CO 80302, U.S.A. We encourage you to refer to the Chicago Manual of Style, 14th Edition, for guidance in questions of style and annotation. The author must obtain copyright clearance for all quotations from published works in excess of the permitted maximum. Please provide a list of endnote and bibliographic references on a separate sheet.

The Journal is not available by subscription. To order previous issues, write to: Managing Editor, Journal of Contemplative Psychotherapy, The Naropa Institute, 2130 Arapahoe Ave., Boulder, CO 80302, U.S.A.

VOLUME IX CONTRIBUTORS

Dr. Peter Fenner is a senior lecturer in Philosophy and Religious Studies at Deakin University, Victoria, Australia. He has lectured in Buddhism and East-West psychology at universities in Australia and the United States. His publications include The Ontology of the Middle Way (Dordrecht, Holland: Kluwer, 1990), Reasoning in Reality (Boston: Wisdom, 1994), and, with Penny Fenner, Intrinsic Freedom (Sydney: Millennium Press, 1993). He was a Buddhist monk in the Tibetan tradition for nine years and is currently offering innovative courses in Australia and the United States based on the perspective of the Middle Path (Madhyamika) and Complete Fulfillment (Dzogchen) traditions.

Jeffrey M. Fortuna, M.A., Buddhist and Western Psychology, Naropa Institute, served as a member of the graduate clinical faculty of the Institute from 1979-1989 and completed a 12-year apprenticeship in clinical psychology with Edward Podvoll, MD, in 1990. From 1981-1989, he co-founded and staffed Maitri Psychological Services in Boulder, Colorado and co-founded and staffed the Friendship House Project and Windhorse Community Services in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He is the founder (1992) and director of Windhorse Associates, Inc. in Northampton, MA.

Kate McQueen Marshall, Ph.D. is a clinical psychologist and consultant practicing in the Boulder, Colorado area. She specializes in work with individuals, couples, and families and their addictive processes.

Pat Patton is a psychotherapist in private practice in Boulder and Denver, Colorado.

Chögyam Trungpa, Rinpoche (1940-1987), scholar and meditation master, was a renowned teacher of Buddhism in the West. He was Founder and President of the Naropa Institute. He authored many books, including The Myth of Freedom, Cutting Through Spiritual Materialism, and Shambhala: The Sacred Path of the Warrior.

Jacquelyn J. Schechter is a clinical psychologist in private practice in Boulder, Colorado. She has been involved with photography for the past 25 years, and is increasingly focused on its practice as a contemplative discipline.

Venerable Dzigar Kongtrul, Rinpoche received traditional training under the guidance of His Holiness Dilgo Khyentse, Rinpoche, Tulku Urgyen, Rinpoche, and the scholar-yogin Khenpo Rinchen. Kongtrul, Rinpoche came to live in the United States in 1989, and currently resides in Boulder, Colorado with his wife and five-year-old son. He is a professor of Buddhist philosophy at The Naropa Institute. This article is based on a weekend seminar Rinpoche taught at the Institute in April 1992.

Karen Kissel Wegela, Ph.D. has been on the faculty of The Naropa Institute since 1980 and is currently the director of the M.A. Psychology program in Contemplative Psychotherapy. She is a licensed psychologist with a private practice in Boulder, Colorado.
